

Resolve Mediation

help for young people

Using mediation to combat conflict from social media, harassment and bullying

This is a fully funded project for young people, aged 11 – 18, to prevent conflict and cyberbullying from escalating into crime.

Mediation:

- is fair, impartial and voluntary
- helps young people to generate mutual respect, understanding and empathy for those they are in conflict with
- is delivered by trained community mediators

Who can take part?

Young people (ages 11 – 18) in conflict due to inappropriate use of social media. They can know each other through school or outside of school.

When can mediation help?

Young people who are willing to resolve conflict, want to avoid further action and have both been involved in communicating via social media.

Resolve can take referrals to mediate between young people where cyberbullying is contributing to distress and harassment. To make a referral, or discuss a potential case, contact the office: info@resolvemediation.com; or call 0118 959 7420.
