Special Educational Needs and Disability Policy

Status:

Statutory

Aims:

To ensure all students with Special Educational Needs and Disabilities (SEND):

- feel safe and happy at school;
- are able to access the curriculum and achieve their potential;
- have access to high quality intervention to accelerate their learning;
- have access to personalised provision as appropriate; and
- are equipped and ready to achieve post-16.

To ensure that there is an ethos of empathy and tolerance amongst all staff and students of students with SEND, in line with our CHARACTER values.

Purpose:

This policy outlines how we, at Denefield School, will meet the needs of students with SEND and fulfil our responsibility as outlined in the SEND Code of Practice 2015, to ensure that all students with SEND are able to access the curriculum and achieve their potential.

As defined in the SEND Code of Practice 2015, 'a child or young person has SEN if they have a learning difficulty or disability which calls for special educational provision to be made for him or her', in that they require provision that is different from, or additional to, that which would generally be made for other students of the same age. We are committed to helping every student to access a high-quality education which meets their ability, interests and aspirations and that enables them to enjoy success in their learning. This includes high attainers as well as students with SEN or medical needs.

The four broad areas of need as outlined in the SEND code of practice 2015 are (also see appendix 1):

1. Communication and Interaction;
2. Cognition and Learning;
3. Social, Emotional and Mental Health; and
4. Physical Disabilities.

- deploy appropriate staffing and funding in place for students with SEND; and
- conduct annual reviews for students with an Education Health and Care Plan (EHCP).

Curriculum and Standards Leaders will:

- attend review meetings for their child.

Students will:

- attend meetings and share their views;
- engage in intervention and support strategies in place; and
- work to the best of their ability to achieve their potential.

Arrangements for monitoring and evaluation of SEND:

Academic progress and engagement for learning are tracked termly. If a student is identified as not making expected progress and a special educational need is identified an appropriate intervention will be put in place. The types of intervention available are outlined in appendix 2.

All staff are encouraged to liaise with the SEND team at any stage if they feel a student may have a SEND.

Where a student continues to make less than expected progress, a graduated approach is taken and specific intervention is identified and put in place in partnership with parents/carers. This is then reviewed termly to demonstrate impact, in line with the 'plan, do, review' cycle.

If, despite intervention, a student continues to make less than expected progress, advice may be sought from external agencies and professionals. This could then lead to a request to the relevant local authority for an Education Health and Care Assessment.

For those students who have an Education Health and Care Plan (EHCP), reviews are held at least annually. They may be held more frequently depending on the need of the student.

In all cases, students with particular identified special educational needs have a student passport. This is a one page document that outlines a student's learning needs, outcomes, barriers to learning, strengths, support in place and strategies to use to support quality first teaching. These are always student centred, and form the basis of the 'plan, do, review' cycle. The student passports are shared confidentially with teaching staff and other relevant members of staff. The student and parents/carers are also invited to contribute to the planning and reviewing of the passport at least annually, to promote a positive and successful partnership and ensure appropriate provision is in place to secure student progress.

Admissions arrangements for students with Education Health and Care Plans (EHCP):

In line with the government school admissions guidelines, a place will be offered to any student who applies or names Denefield School as their preference in the student's EHCP, providing we are able to make any reasonable adjustments in line with the SEND code of practice 2015 in order to meet the special educational needs of that individual. This is reviewed in line with the school's accessibility plan.

Complaints procedure:

A complaints policy is in place and this should be followed in the first instance. After this, if parents remain unsatisfied, they can appeal to a SEND tribunal against local authority decisions and EHC Plans. For support in appealing, SENDIASS can help. Appendix 1:

Definitions of Areas of Special Educational Need

1) Communication and interaction

Students with SEN may have difficulties in one or more of the areas of speech, language and communication. These children and young people need help to develop their linguistic competence in order to support their thinking, as well as their communication skills. Specific learning difficulties such as dyslexia or a physical or sensory impairment such as hearing loss may also lead to communication difficulties.

Those with speech, language and communication needs (SLCN) cover the whole ability range. They find it more difficult to communicate with others. They may have problems taking part in conversations, either because they find it difficult to understand what others say or because they have difficulties with fluency and forming sounds, words and sentences. It may be that when they hear or see a word they are not able to understand its meaning, leading to words being used incorrectly in or out of context and the child having a smaller vocabulary. It may be a combination of these problems. For some children and young people, difficulties may become increasingly apparent as the language they need to understand and use becomes more complex.

Children and young people with an Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD), including Asperger's Syndrome and Autism, have difficulty in making sense of the world in the way others do. They may have difficulties with communication, social interaction and imagination. In addition they may be easily distracted or upset by certain stimuli, have problems with change to familiar routines or have difficulties with their co-ordination and fine-motor functions.

2) Cognition and learning

Children and young people with learning difficulties will learn at a slower pace than other children and may have greater difficulty than their peers in acquiring basic literacy or numeracy skills or in understanding concepts, even with appropriate differentiation. They may also have other difficulties such as speech and language delay, low self-esteem, low levels of concentration and under-developed social skills.

Children and young people with a learning difficulty are at increased risk of developing a mental health problem. They may need additional support with their social development, self-esteem and emotional well-being.

Children and young people with severe learning difficulties (SLD) have significant intellectual or cognitive impairments and are likely to need support in all areas of the curriculum. They may have difficulties in mobility and co-ordination, communication and perception, and the acquisition of self-help skills. Children and young people with SLD are likely to need support to be independent. Those with profound and multiple learning difficulties (PMLD) have severe and complex learning difficulties as well as significant other difficulties such as a physical disability or a sensory impairment. They are likely to need sensory stimulation and a curriculum broken down into very small steps. These children and young people require a high level of adult support, both for their educational needs and for their personal care.

A child or young person with a Specific learning difficulty (SpLD) may have difficulty with one or more aspects of learning. This includes a range of conditions such as dyslexia (difficulties with reading and spelling); dyscalculia (maths); dyspraxia (co-ordination) and dysgraphia (writing).

3) Social, mental and emotional health

For some children and young people, difficulties in their emotional and social development, can mean that they require additional and different provision in order for them to achieve. Children and young people who have difficulties with their emotional and social development may have immature social skills and find it difficult to make and sustain healthy relationships. These difficulties may be displayed through the child or young person becoming withdrawn or isolated, as well as through challenging, disruptive or disturbing behaviour.

A wide range and degree of mental health problems might require special provision to be made. These could manifest as difficulties such as problems of mood (anxiety or depression), problems of conduct (oppositional problems and more severe conduct problems including aggression), self-harming, substance abuse, eating disorders or physical symptoms that are medically unexplained. Some children and young people may have other recognised disorders such as attention deficit disorder (ADD), attention deficit hyperactive disorder (ADHD), attachment disorder, autism or pervasive developmental disorder, an anxiety disorder, a disruptive disorder or, rarely, schizophrenia or bipolar disorder.

4) Sensory and/or physical needs

There is a wide range of sensory and physical difficulties that affect children and young people across the ability range. Many children and young people require minor adaptations to the curriculum, their study programme or the physical environment. Many such adaptations may be required as reasonable adjustments under the Equality Act 2010.

Children and young people with a visual impairment (VI) or a hearing impairment (HI) may require specialist support and equipment to access their learning. Children and young people with a Multi-Sensory Impairment (MSI) have a combination of visual and hearing difficulties, which makes it much more difficult for them to access the curriculum or study programme than those with a single sensory impairment. Some children and young people with a physical disability (PD) require additional on-going support and equipment to access all the opportunities available to their peers.
